List of Non-Medical Dietary Restrictions

Mormonism	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Prohibited from drinking tea, coffee or alcohol
Judaism	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Prohibited from pork, shellfish, animals with split hooves and which chew the cud (sheep and cows) Restrictions known as Kosher A Kosher kitchen is divided into separate sections one for dairy, and meat. Different sets of utensils, pots, pans, plates, knives, chopping boards, one for meat and poultry and the other for dairy foods. Many Jewish people practice some or all of these restrictions in various degrees. It would be best to inquire as to what if any restrictions they have. Fish is acceptable as long as it has fins and scales. Refrain from eating meat and dairy products at the same meal No wine, unless its kosher wine All meat has to be prepared by a qualified kosher butcher (shochet) If meat was eaten in the same day, one must wait six hours before consuming any dairy products
Islam	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Prohibited from carnivorous animals, pork, and pork products, alcohol, lard, gelatin, whey, vanilla extract. Restrictions known as Halaal. During the holy month of Ramadan, Muslims are not allowed to eat from dawn to sunset. However young children, pregnant women and the sick are often exempted. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Sea animals which do not have fins or scales are considered undesirable by some Muslims. • Permissible meat other than pork can be eaten only if it is prepared in the correct way (Halaal). • Utensils should be separate for Muslims. There should be no contamination of Halaal and non Halaal.

Hindu	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Most Hindus do not eat meat (strict Hindus are vegetarians) and beef is prohibited universally • Beef is prohibited between the end of winter and arrival of spring.
Sikh	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Sikhs do not have many strict rules regarding food but many are vegetarians.
Buddhist	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Strict Buddhists are vegetarians and their dishes vary since many live in India and China, where available foods will be different.
Vegetarian and Vegans	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Lacto-ovo Vegetarians eat dairy foods and eggs as well as plant foods. They do not eat meat, poultry, or fish. • Ovo-Vegetarians eat only eggs and plant foods. They do not eat dairy foods, meat, poultry, or fish. • Lacto-vegetarian eats dairy foods and plant foods. They do not eat eggs, meat, poultry, or fish. • Vegans or strict vegetarians eat only plant foods and products. The term vegan generally refers to individuals who share a philosophy and lifestyle as well as a restricted diet. They do not eat any products derived from animals, eggs, or dairy products.
