As the ethanol industry expands, communities must be well prepared and trained to respond to ethanol-related emergencies. The flammability of ethanol combined with its water solubility present unique response challenges.

Join representatives from public safety, public health, public works, Selectboards, Public Information and other municipal officials from across Hampshire County to learn how to plan for and manage an ethanol spill.

The Exercise will focus on:

- On-site Incident Command
- Multi-agency Coordination (EOC management)
- Hazardous Materials Management
- Usability of New Ethanol Field Guide

Discussion will include specific strategies to close the gap between current and required levels of preparedness including planning, resource management, training and exercises.
